

COMPANY HISTORY

Since 1965, a passion for viticulture led Piero Mancini to develop more than 100 hectares of vineyards located in various areas of Gallura. These vineyards produce several grape varieties, ranging from Moscato to Cannonau, from Cabernet Sauvignon to Merlot, with Vermentino di Gallura DOCG (the only DOCG designation in Sardinia) playing the leading role.

In 1987, Piero Mancini decided to process his own grapes, carrying out a project he had long envisioned: building a winery where grape growing could be combined with winemaking and bottling. In 1989, overlooking the Gulf of Olbia, a modern winery was inaugurated, where the most advanced oenological techniques blend perfectly with solid tradition.

Since 2001, following the passing of its founder, the company has been managed by his wife and children. Today, the winery produces 1,500,000 bottles, of which approximately 30% are sold in Sardinia, about 60% throughout the rest of Italy, and 10% abroad (Germany, England, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Belgium, China, Bulgaria, Ukraine, Japan, Australia, and the USA).

The company has adopted mechanical harvesting for several years. The wine is stored in stainless steel tanks, with a total capacity of approximately 12,000 hectoliters.
